

Two Column Layout

Left Column

The left column runs down the page and its paragraph breaks line up with the right column's, which is what makes a band split before a gutter split read across the page.

A second left paragraph, set at the same indent and the same size as the first one.

Right Column

The right column is a separate reading run and every one of its lines belongs after the whole of the left one, never woven between the left column's own lines.

A second right paragraph, matching the left one's leading exactly.

Style Signals

This line is set in the plain body face.

This line is set italic and says so in its name.

This line is bold by descriptor, not by name.

This line is italic by descriptor, not by name.

This line is bold and named for it.